A message from Rod Park

Please join me in celebrating 25 years of Salmon Festival and six million years of salmon in the Sandy River at the annual Salmon Festival at Metro's Oxbow Regional Park October 11th and 12th. This festival celebrates the special connection between people and wild salmon and inspires us to value clean water and healthy watersheds.

The Salmon Festival provides activities and exhibits to help us better understand the challenges of managing the region's fish, wildlife and water resources while balancing the needs of a growing metropolitan region. The festival also features great entertainment, children's activities, horse-drawn wagon rides, a salmon bake, arts and crafts, environmental exhibits and a food court. Entertainment, exhibits, children's activities and food areas are all under cover.

New to the festival this year is the Sandy River Fall Chinook timeline, chronicling 400 million years of geologic activity and six million years of salmon in the Sandy River. The timeline provides visual representation of the story of the salmon and connects key events to sites in the park visitors can walk to.

Another new event, "Salmon bites: Ten minute tales from the Sandy River story," gives attendees a chance to learn more about the salmon's home in the Sandy River with a series of short presentations between 1 and 2 p.m. both days given by staff from environmental organizations, local utilities and federal agencies.

Festival-goers also have the chance to win a print of an original salmon painting by Roger Long, renowned local artist and salmon advocate. By completing and returning a pledge card that commits the holder to just one item from a list of "25 things you can do to protect our region's watersheds," participants qualify for the drawing.

Oxbow Regional Park is located in the Sandy River Gorge, 8 miles east of Gresham. Festival admission is $8 per vehicle or $12 per bus. Pets are not allowed. For more information, visit www.oregonmetro.gov/salmonfestival or call 503-797-1850.

Festival Hosts: Metro, Portland General Electric, Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission, Portland Water Bureau and Mt. Hood National Forest.

Zoo welcomes baby elephant Samudra

Rose-Tu, a 14-year-old Asian elephant and first-time mother, gave birth to a 286-pound male calf at the Oregon Zoo on Aug 23. More than 17,000 people cast votes to help keepers name the baby elephant. The winner, with 35 percent of the votes is "Samudra," or Sam for short. Samudra is Hindi for "lord of the ocean." After zookeepers made some time for the Mother and baby to bond, zoo visitors have been able to see the healthy baby elephant trotting around the gallery, following his mother.

Rose-Tu, born August 31, 1994, was the most recent elephant born at the zoo. Rose-Tu is a popular elephant within the herd and with her keepers. She is always looking to tease her herd mates and shares a strong friendship with Chendra, who is nearly the same age. Rose-Tu is the second smallest elephant in the herd, weighing about 7,600 pounds. She conceived in late 2006.

The Oregon Zoo has a renowned breeding program for endangered Asian elephants. More than 25 elephants have been born at the zoo, beginning with Packy in 1962.

An endangered species, Asian elephants are represented by an estimated 38,000 to 51,000 individuals living in fragmented populations in the wild. Agriculture, deforestation and conflict with humans pose a constant threat to wild Asian elephants.

About Metro

Clean air and clean water do not stop at city limits or county lines. Neither does the need for jobs, a thriving economy and good transportation choices for people and businesses in our region. Voters have asked Metro to help with the challenges that cross those lines and affect the 25 cities and three counties in the Portland metropolitan area.

A regional approach simply makes sense when it comes to protecting open space, caring for parks, planning for the best use of land, managing garbage disposal and increasing recycling. Metro oversees world-class facilities such as the Oregon Zoo, which contributes to conservation and education, and the Oregon Convention Center, which benefits the region's economy.
