Introduction: Biography of Metro Councilor Rod Park

Rod Park was elected to the Metro Council in 1998 and served from 1999 through 2010 as the representative of District 1, which includes his hometown Gresham as well as Wood Village, Troutdale, Fairview and parts of East Portland.

Park is the owner of Park's Nursery, Gresham, which was established in 1953 by his father. The conversion of prime farm land into urban uses was one of the issues with which Park was most concerned during his Metro Council tenure.

In his final message to his constituents, dated December 2010, Park looked back at his Metro service:

Twelve years ago I ran for Metro councilor because as a native Oregonian I was concerned about our communities. I ran because our residents wanted good jobs and housing, an effective transportation system, world class regional facilities, and economically and environmentally sustainable approaches to how we build and support our communities. I ran because we needed to protect the farm lands surrounding the region which make this a special place. I ran because frankly, we needed a more responsive Metro.

In my 12 years on the council I have made progress on changes residents wanted to see. We have been able to make reasonable land use decisions which better reflect what people want for better communities. We have developed a transportation system plan that is more realistic financially and provides mobility for people and freight to move within and through the region to support, not displace, our communities. Our solid waste systems are now better integrated to help our sustainability goals of decreased waste and increased recycling. Two new regional nature parks, Cooper Mountain and Graham Oaks have opened. Through your votes, the beloved Oregon Zoo will receive much needed help, and Metro also will be able to continue to purchase more natural areas like the 70 acres on Scouter's Mountain in Happy Valley and the 1,143 acres on Chehalem Ridge in Washington County.

I take pride in having chaired the Community Planning Committee which guided Metro through a major growth management decision. This led to increased efficiencies within the urban growth boundary, and land added for urban uses came at minimal expense to the farm lands we are trying to preserve for future generations. The combination of these efforts will help provide the foundation for jobs and housing for our needs in the future such as in Damascus and the Springwater area south of Gresham while increasing the desirability of lands already inside the boundary.

I am pleased to have sponsored the Nature in the Neighborhood grant program. This four year program has helped move Metro from solely regulation to inspiration by providing incentives for local habitat protection and restoration projects. The $1.5 million has leveraged more than $7 million in restoration efforts on many acres of habitat across the region.

I am also proud of the progress on a number of projects in District 1. Working with our regional partners, Metro has helped bring new and improved MAX facilities, such as the most recent opening of Civic Drive Station. The 223rd Ave. underpass has been improved, providing better connections between Gresham, Fairview and Blue Lake Park. Work has started on the East Metro Connections Plan, a project that will help determine the best ways to improve the north-south connections in the eastern portion of the Metro region.

While the current real estate market is dismal, Metro's Transit Oriented Development has continued to build projects to provide much needed jobs. These projects are a combination of ground level retail with living spaces above. The most recent is 3rd Central in historic Gresham across from the Multnomah County library which added a much needed grocery store. This builds on the other projects of Central Point, The Beranger, The Crossings and land holdings next to Gresham Civic light rail station. Combined, these continue to leverage private investments to acquire more amenities such as jobs, restaurants, shops, and more into our downtowns.

We've purchased about 1,600 acres in 70 acquisitions of open space in the district during the last 12 years to help maintain our connections with nature. Some examples are 62 acres at Mt. Hood Community College along Beaver Creek, 44 acres along the Columbia Shoreline, 106 acres between Darby Ridge and Persimmon and 18 acres in Deep Creek. These areas all continue to build on a targeted plan to protect water quality and to provide connectivity for both people and animals.

Not all discussions or decisions in the region have come without a struggle. When local hotel/motel tax money was going to be diverted from the smaller cities in Multnomah County to PGE Park, I was able to keep that funding for their local needs. This has funded projects such as improvements at the swim center at Mt. Hood Community College, local tourism marketing and most recently funding to help bring the U.S.S. Ranger to East County. ("A personal message," 2010)

In addition to his public service as a Metro Councilor Park has served as the Oregon governor of the American Nursery and Landscape Association and as a member of the Oregon Board of Agriculture. He is a past president of the Oregon Association of Nurserymen, and he served on the Gresham 2020 Committee, the Envision Gresham Committee and the Mt. Hood Parkway Committee.

Park graduated from Oregon State University with a degree in horticulture in 1977 before joining the family business in 1980. He is married to Joy Guidry, a former assistant principal at Sam Barlow High School, Gresham.

Summary Collection Description

The Councilor Rod Park Collection documents the activities of a dedicated public servant. Although Rod Park's many achievements in his 12 years as a Metro councilor are recorded officially in committee and council minutes (see "Related Records"), this collection offers an opportunity to understand the depth of consultation, research and preparation involved in crafting policy for the Metro region. Additionally, many notes and letters express Park's cordial relationships with constituents, colleagues and members of staff. The range of his interests and commitments, particularly to farm issues, is apparent.

The collection comprises originals, photocopies and computer printouts of correspondence (e.g., letters, emails, voicemail transcriptions, telephone messages, faxes and postcards) by and between Metro Councilor Rod Park, other Metro councilors and Metro staff, and members of the public and or / their representatives. There are also printouts of PowerPoint slide presentations made by Park and speaking points and scripts prepared by him and / or Metro staff. The material covers the entire 12-year period of Park's tenure as Metro councilor for District 1, representing Gresham, Wood Village, Troutdale, Fairview and parts of East Portland.

These materials were gathered by Kathryn Sofich, the Metro policy coordinator who worked with Park, after Park left office at the end of 2010. The materials were placed in file folders under subject headings, in the following order:

- Urban Growth Boundary Correspondence
- Land Use Correspondence
- Transportation Correspondence
- Parks and Natural Areas Correspondence
- General Correspondence
- Solid Waste and Recycling Correspondence
- Internal Operations Correspondence
- Venues / Tourism Correspondence
- Presentations
- Speaking Points

These headings have been retained as series titles and original order has been maintained. For ease of searching and retrieval, the series are subdivided into folders by year. Within each folder materials are arranged in chronological order with the earliest date on top. Access points to the contents of each folder are provided: keywords, titles, names, and ordinance and / or resolution numbers. A glossary of acronyms and a list of Library of Congress Subject Headings are included as appendices.

The Councilor Rod Park Collection Finding Aid is available for review in both hard copy and electronic format. Please contact Becky Shoemaker, Metro Records Officer / Archivist at (503) 797-1740 for further information.
