Dear Mr. Pung,

Congratulations on your recent election as Vice Chair of MCCI. Effective citizen involvement is essential to good government and to the future of the Metro region, and active participation from Metro committees is an important part of our policy development and planning processes.

Your hard work and dedication to the MCCI committee is valued and appreciated. I wish you well in your new position as Vice Chair.

Sincerely,

Councilor Thompson,

As part of Metro's on-going effort to work with local partners in the most efficient and effective ways possible, I am enclosing a copy of our "Partnership Survey". Please take a moment to fill it out and fax it back to our Outreach Office. That fax number is 797-1793.

In this survey, you will have the opportunity to sign up to receive agendas for particular committees (or to ask to come off those agenda lists). You will also be able to tell us how we can best communicate with you (e-mail, fax, mail) and what kinds of information we can provide to you. In addition, we are asking each jurisdiction to let us know if they are interested in partnering with us to produce "town hall" style meetings or other events to increase citizen involvement around the region.

I know this is a busy time, and I appreciate your help in this.

Best Wishes,

Television can have substantial impacts on our society these days. We all know the detrimental effects it can have related to violence, literacy, and family life. But today, I want to share with you some of the positive effects television can have.

Metro has applied for a grant through the Mount Hood Cable Regulatory Commission. Those grant funds would allow this regional government to use the power of TV to encourage education of and involvement by the people who live here. The equipment would enable Metro to cablecast every Council meeting to homes in every area of this region. It would also provide the possibility for interactive citizen participation through the use of webcasting.

Right now, Metro is making an effort to get the taped coverage of the meetings to various parts of the region. However, logistics make it very difficult to get those meeting tapes to all parts of the region, and logistics make it impossible to coordinate the broadcasts so there is one, standard playback schedule. These problems present roadblocks to anyone who is really interested in working with Metro to preserve the nature of our region.

Grant funds provided by you will be a boon to Metro. However, the real winners will be the people who live and work in this region. They will have ready (and reliable) access to information about the many important decisions Metro is making. I encourage you keep this in mind as you review the application.

Sincerely,

William B. Willmes

Governments in our society have a couple of big problems: people think they spend too much money, and people don't understand what they do.

Long meetings and workshops and public hearings just don't work anymore. They are expensive, confusing and, if you've shown up at any of these recently, you were probably one of the few people who did. Government has to change to keep pace with the lifestyles and needs of the people it serves.

Computers and TV's are the best ways to communicate with people today. They are widely used, and new technology gives citizens the opportunity to use these tools interactively. Metro has a proposal before you to make the most of the tools and technology available.

The grant proposal would provide cameras and other equipment to Metro to kick off a realistic, viable public involvement campaign that can take it into the 21st Century. Please know that, without your help, this opportunity will simply pass us by. Ever-shrinking budgets and ever-increasing duties make such work impossible without the infusion of outside money.

Thank you for your interest, and please consider Metro's request with attention to the benefits it would bring to the citizens of this region.

Sincerely,

The teenagers of today have many things on their minds. Near the bottom of the list is finding a way to get downtown to go to a governmental meeting in the middle of the day. My concern is that these teenagers are our future. They are the ones who will have to live with the decisions of today tomorrow, and, more importantly, they are the ones who will have to make the decisions of tomorrow. We need to find ways that involve these teens and get them interested in civic service.

Metro has a proposal before you that could do this. With the equipment it could buy and the services it could provide, we would be able to engage teenagers in ways that they appreciate: television and the internet. For example, a government class would be able to spend time watching portions of a meeting live, or it could use Metro's web site to do research on recent meetings. That same class could use the information they've learned to write letters to their elected leaders, debate the issues or get involved in related civic projects.

Traditional government operating in traditional ways doesn't appeal to the young people today. Just look at how difficult it is to get people to vote. That is why it is critical that we find ways to engage them and show them why they should care about the workings of our governments.

Please join me in supporting Metro's efforts to look to the future and help the younger generations take part in shaping their future.

Re: Metro Grant Request

I am writing to ask for your support of the Metro grant request for new technology in bringing public meeting broadcasts to the citizens of our community.

Citizen involvement and participation is critical in our democratic process, however, with busy work schedules and commitments, it is often difficult to keep up with government meetings when they are broadcast. I believe that offering alternative avenues for the public to have access to government is important in assuring that citizens continue to have a meaningful role in the decision making process.

These alternative avenues may be available through use of new technology such as viewing meetings via the Internet, providing email testimony to their elected officials, and allowing citizens to view meetings and broadcasts at times which are convenient to them.

Metro, our regional government is applying to you for a grant that would give it the ability to take the first steps toward high-tech public involvement. As an interested citizen, I ask that you support this grant request.

The people who live in the Metro area do live here for very specific reasons. They love the rivers and the trees and the wildlife. They love the fact that they can go to the mountain in the morning and the ocean in the afternoon. They love the fact that their neighbors and friends care enough about the natural resources here that they are willing to work to preserve those resources.

An important player in that effort is our regional government, Metro. Metro serves 1.3 million people who live in the urban parts of Multnomah, Washington and Clackamas Counties. However, the impacts of Metro's work stretches much further – out into the farm and forest land that encircles our metropolitan area.

Metro's work is critical to the future of this region. Streams and airsheds and roads don't stop at city borders or county lines. What happens in Gresham will affect those who live in Beaverton. That is where Metro comes in. It brings together citizens and local partners and business interests so that everyone can help make decisions that will benefit the region as a whole as opposed to select, individual areas.

The reason that I am writing is that Metro needs help in this endeavor, particularly in its efforts to reach out and involve citizens. The proposal to create live cablecasts of Metro's meetings as well as regular re-broadcast schedule of those meetings is a good first step. These meetings would be available to all cable systems within our region as opposed to just a few as is now the case. A good second step would be to make the system Metro has proposed interactive. This would allow citizens and others to communicate instantaneously with the Metro officials who are making those decisions that are crucial to the livability of our communities.

I urge you to give a lot of weight to Metro's request. There is no government within this area that can have such a large effect on such a large number of people. Please help us to make that effect a positive one for the people who live here and love our way of life.

Thank you,

Tigges

Dear Commissioners:

Citizen involvement and participation is the cornerstone of democracy. But with the goings on of our busy world, we are often overwhelmed with our basic responsibilities to family and work.

So how can we have a meaningful role in the decisions being made by governmental bodies? I believe that new technology is the key. More and more homes in our region have computers. Internet access is also widely available in our schools and public libraries. Technology available now would allow people to log into a web site and watch a "web-cast" of recent meetings - or even live coverage of meetings.

Imagine the possibilities of citizens being able to, with a click of the mouse, provide immediate testimony via email. Or perhaps, they could participate in a survey of options before the elected officials on a particular subject. More importantly, the meetings would be available to watch at any time of any day.

Metro, our regional government, is applying to you for a grant that would give it the ability to take the first steps toward high tech public involvement. I ask, as an interested and concerned citizen, that you give this application your full attention and support.

Thank you.

Dear Board of Commissioners:

The people who live in the metro area do live here for very specific reasons. They love the rivers and the trees and the wildlife. They love the fact that they can go to the mountain in the morning and the ocean in the afternoon. They love the fact that their neighbors and friends care enough about the natural resources here that they are willing to work to preserve those resources.

An important player in that effort is our regional government, Metro. Metro serves 1.3 million people who live in the urban parts of Multnomah, Washington and Clackamas counties. However, the impacts of Metro's work stretches much further - out into the farm and forest land that encircles our metropolitan area.

Metro's work is critical to the future of this region. Streams and air sheds and roads don't stop at city borders or county lines. What happens in Gresham will affect those who live in Beaverton. That is where Metro comes in. It brings together citizens and local partners and business interests so that everyone can help make decisions that will benefit the region as a whole as opposed to select, individual areas.

The reason that I am writing is that Metro needs help in this endeavor, particularly in its efforts to reach out and involve citizens. The proposal to create live cable casts of Metro's meetings as well as regular rebroadcast schedule of those meetings is a good first step. These meetings would be available to all cable systems within our region as opposed to just a few as is now the case. A good second step would be to make the system Metro has proposed interactive. This would allow citizens and others to communicate instantaneously with the Metro officials who are making those decisions that are crucial to the livability of our communities.

I urge you to give a lot of weight to Metro's request. There is no government within this area that can have such a large effect on such a large number of people. Please help us to make effect a positive one for the people who live here and love our way of life.

Thank you.

Sincerely

Dear Board of Commissioners

Governments in our society have a couple of big problems: people think they spend too much money, and people don't understand what governments do.

Long meetings and workshops and public hearings just don't work anymore. They are expensive, confusing and, if you've shown up at any of these recently, you were probably one of the few people who did. Government has to change to keep pace with the lifestyles and needs of the people it serves.

Computers and TV's are the best ways to communicate with people today. They are widely used, and new technology gives citizens the opportunity to use these tools interactively. Metro has a proposal before you to make the most of the tools and technology available.

The grant proposal would provide cameras and other equipment to Metro to kick off a realistic, viable public involvement campaign that can take it into the 21st Century. Please know that, without your help, this opportunity will simply pass us by. Ever-shrinking budgets and ever-increasing duties make such work impossible without the infusion of outside money.

Thank for your interest, and please consider Metro's request with attention to the benefits it would bring to the citizens of this region.

Sincerely,

Michelle Parman

Dear Board of Commissioners:

Metro has the great challenge of acting to promote a sustainable future for people here today and for the future generations in Multnomah, Clackamas and Washington counties. Comprehensive contact between Metro councilors and all people residing in the region is of utmost importance.

For time is short for Metro to act wisely to conserve and preserve the region's dwindling natural resources and yet maintain a high standard of living for the people. Advanced cable and Internet technology will allow Metro to inform and seek response from the greatest numbers of the people in the three counties. The resulting interaction will encourage debate as well as camaraderie among our people in a full democratic process. Metro will have the best opportunities, therefore, to find solutions and make decisions which give promise to a desirable future.

The Mt. Hood Cable Regulatory Commission can definitely help attain this goal. It can make it possible for Metro acquire the technology needed for such a most worthy cause—a sustainable future in Multnomah, Clackamas, and Washington Counties—by responding generously to Metro's grant application. Please do so.

Thank you for your attention.

Sincerely,

Eulia J. Mishima

Dear Commissioners:

Television can have substantial impact on our society. We all know the detrimental effects it can have related to violence, literacy, and family life. But today, I want to share with you some of the positive effects television can have.

Metro has applied for a grant through the Mt Hood Cable Regulatory Commission. Those grant funds would allow this regional governmental to use the power of TV to encourage education of and involvement by the people who live here. The equipment would enable Metro to cablecase every Council meeting to homes in every area of this region. It would also provide the possibility for interactive citizen participation through the use of web casting.

Right now, Metro is making an effort to get the taped coverage of the meetings to various parts of the region. However, logistics make it very difficult to get those meetings tapes to all parts of the region, and logistics make it impossible to coordinate the broadcasts so there is one, standard playback schedule. These problems present roadblocks to anyone really interest in working with Metro to preserve the nature of our region.

Grand funds provided by you will be a boon to Metro. However, the real winners will be the people who live and work in this region. They will have ready (and reliable) access to information about the many important decisions Metro is making. I encourage you keep this in mind as you review the application.

Sincerely,

Loretta Johnson
