METRO

Metro Digital Archive Project
Metro Councilor Oral History Interviews

Purpose and Scope of the Project

In general, the Metro Digital Archive Project addresses the agency's ongoing need to document its history. The rationale for this effort is based upon the premise that all government agencies have a past, a present, and a future. Metro – in being the nation's only directly elected regional government - has a unique identity that can be defined by its current activities and its purpose; this identity is formed by its past. For Metro's past to be understood, the records documenting that past must be systematically preserved.

With this in mind, one of the goals of this project is to research and document the public service of Metro's elected officials, and promote public access to the information through web-based technology. Since 2005, Metro staff has been working with primary resources to research councilors' terms of office, district representation, internal and external committee assignments, policy initiatives, and professional background. In researching the public service of Metro councilors, students have been reviewing councilors' professional papers including (but not limited to) correspondence, speeches, newsletters, calendars, photographs, and information relating to community events, and special engagements/awards.

An important component of this effort is conducting oral history interviews. Oral history interviewing records a person's recollection of experiences, thoughts and feelings about a specific event or a period of time. It gathers data not available in written records about people, events, decisions, and processes. In essence, oral history is spoken history grounded in memory. It can reveal how individual values and actions shaped the past, and how the past shapes present-day values and actions. With this in mind, students participating in this project have been asked to conduct interviews with Metro councilors to capture their personal reflections and anecdotes regarding their public service; to gather insight about municipal politics; and to further the goal of documenting Metro's history as a public agency.

The Interview Release Form provided below documents permissions and guidelines for the use and custody of the information gathered during the interview process.

INTERVIEW RELEASE FORM

I hereby give my permission to _____ (Metro interviewer) to use the information gathered in this interview for educational purposes relating to the Metro Digital Archive Project.
